Description

LeddarTech and its affiliates (hereinafter, the “Company”) operate in the field of design, development, production and commercialization of LiDAR components, software and related technologies for various markets, including the mobility and automotive markets. The LiDAR technology developed by the Company enables to detect objects and map their distances with great spatial coverage, in all lighting conditions, making the Company’s sensors a technology of choice for autonomous driving applications. The Company collects data from the use of its sensors on vehicles in various weather conditions, which data is thereafter converted into datasets. These datasets are managed by the Company and provided in machine-readable formats. Therefore, by making its datasets available, the Company wishes to work in collaboration with the scientific and academic communities in order to participate in the growth and success of autonomous driving and other applications requiring LiDAR technology. The datasets provided by the Company are made available free of charge, but under the terms and conditions below. We hope these datasets will be useful to you.
